2024 PART IV

For a quarter of a century, Putin has dreamed of ending the era of American hegemony that followed the Cold War. Just 11 days after his shock appointment as acting president in 1999, Putin signed a National Security Policy declaring that Russia will facilitate the formation of an ideology of establishing a multipolar world. In theory, the multipolar world describes the end of American unipolarity. In reality, it is a synonym for the return of Russia's international standing...Russia today has less power in the Middle East and across the post-Soviet space than it did a decade ago...The Kremlin lacks the money, materiel, and motivation to do little more than hope that its international influence does not erode further. Short on options, and following his response to the Arab Spring, Putin will likely attempt to boost his domestic standing with attacks on Ukraine and more aggressive nationalism at home. This inward turn is not the multipolar world order Vladimir Putin was hoping for.

Moscow is seeking to secure the future of its key military bases in Syria while making inroads with the country's new rebel leadership, after the dramatic collapse of the Assad regime threatened to erode Russia's influence in the Middle East...Russia has kept a sizeable airbase in north-west Syria and a naval facility at the Mediterranean port of Tartus since Moscow's military intervention helped President Bashar al-Assad reclaim most of the country after nationwide protests that began in 2011...After the collapse of Assad, the Kremlin's staunchest ally in the Middle East who has fled to Moscow, Russia appears to be turning to diplomacy to preserve its influence in Syria...

Regardless: the Kenites on the multipolar end of the globalist spectrum will continue to attempt to talk the so-called multipolar world order into existence as the Ezekiel 38 confederacy continues to formulate up until it becomes the bear of Daniel 7 at the woe of the fifth trumpet when the five month long hour of temptation begins. Until then, the hidden agents of Edom will continue to fill the West with pro-Kremlin (i.e. pro-multipolar) propaganda as nation continues to rise against nation meaning the Kenite nation rising against itself through unipolar vs. multipolar globalism.

But there will be no so-called 'new world order' until Satan and his angels get cast to earth at the woe of the fifth trumpet because only then does the one world political system of Revelation 13 emerge, which will then receive a deadly wound, after which it becomes a one world religious system when Satan appears as the antichrist in Jerusalem at the woe of the sixth trumpet. The TRUE Christ will not return AT ALL until the woe of the seventh trumpet.

WHAT ASSAD'S FALL MEANS BEYOND SYRIA

(theweek.com, 12-10-24)

(EXCERPT)

The liberation of Damascus "reflects a likely catastrophic loss of Russia's significant investment in the Assad regime", said R. Clarke Cooper, senior fellow at the Atlantic Council. Losing the two military bases would "damage Moscow's ability to manoeuvre in Africa and the Mediterranean", which may in turn "have a strategic impact on Russian influence across the world".

Like Moscow, Tehran has been quick to open up a "direct line of communication" with rebels in Syria, said Reuters. But there is also "little doubt" it remains hugely concerned "about how the change of power in Damascus will affect Iran's influence in Syria, the lynchpin of its regional clout".

The transition of power in Damascus is "set to reshape the balance of power in the region", said The Telegraph, with Turkey's President Recep Tayyip Erdogan "probably emerging as a major beneficiary".

"We have reached the end of the beginning in Syria. The one thing that brought the opposition together is now gone...It is likely to be a long time before Syria resembles a normal country."
